Summer Law Fellowships

For the summer of 2009, the Williams Institute will award two or more Summer Fellowships, including the Gleason/Kettel Law Fellowships, which provide law students, or recent law school graduates, with a $5,000 stipend to work with an organization, scholar, or research center, focused on sexual orientation law and public policy.

The Gleason/Kettel Law Fellowship is committed to inspiring law students to pursue careers in sexual orientation law and public policy. Through the fellowship, students gain experience and insight into the field and provide much-needed support to various organizations and scholars. Fellows must spend at least ten weeks at their placements. The Gleason/Kettel Law Fellowships are made possible by a generous endowment gift to the Williams Institute by Mike Gleason and David Kettel.

Eligible Placements

Eligible placements include organizations, scholars, or research centers focused on sexual orientation law and public policy. Examples of eligible placements include the summer internship programs of Lambda Legal, ACLU Lesbian and Gay Rights Project, the National Center for Lesbian Rights, Gay and Lesbian Advocates and Defenders (GLAD), the Williams Institute on Sexual Orientation Law and Public Policy, and similar national and local organizations. Eligible placements also include summer research positions with law professors where the applicant will be spending the entire summer assisting with sexual orientation law and policy scholarship.

Criteria for Selection

Applicants for the fellowship must be law students or a recent law school graduates dedicated to a career in research, teaching, or advocacy focused on sexual orientation law and policy issues. Selection criteria for the fellowship include a) the applicant's academic record, b) the applicant's demonstrated commitment to a career in research, teaching, or advocacy focused on sexual orientation law and policy issues, c) the organization with which the applicant will be working, d) the work or projects that the applicant is proposing to complete during his or her fellowship and e) the applicant's potential as a future leader.

Preference will be given to applicants who have arranged a summer position with an organization before they apply for funding. The final award of funding will be contingent upon confirmation of placement with an eligible organization or research position.

Fellowship Award

The Fellowships will provide a stipend of $5,000 for the fellow to work full-time for ten weeks at an eligible placement (described above).

Application

To apply, please submit the application form below, a 1-2 page cover letter addressing the selection criteria listed above, a resume, and a law school transcript.

This year's application deadline is April 15th, 2009.

The Williams Institute

The Williams Institute advances sexual orientation law and public policy through rigorous, independent research and scholarship, and disseminates it to judges, legislators, policymakers, media and the public. A national think tank at UCLA Law, the Williams Institute produces high quality research with real-world relevance.

Experts at the Williams Institute have authored dozens of public policy studies and law review articles, filed amicus briefs in key court cases, provided expert testimony at legislative hearings, been widely cited in the national media, and trained thousands of lawyers, judges and members of the public. By providing new ideas and reliable information, the Williams Institute makes a difference.
